

Hallucination...

“Cover me!” I screamed as I ran to the next hole in the ground. The sound was a cacophony as I ducked down “You alright there?” whispered a voice behind me. I turned around and saw my head commander putting his hand out to greet me. I shook his hand and I was about to tell him that we are in the middle of a battle. But a bullet flew straight above my helmet. I raise my gun and fire towards the enemies. “FIRE!” my commander screamed. We kept firing at the other end of the battlefield until. “HOLD!” We all held our guns seeing that we had won the battle, “Yeah!” We screamed.

Me and my commander chatted and walked for a while until he stopped walking for a split second, he looked around carefully and roared. “Fire!” . We all saw a skinny man in an opposite outfit as we walked around with a gun behind the bushes. I shot him. “Good job Phil”, yelled my commander, Joe, while giving me a hard pat on the back.

While we went back to our camp we started to get sleepy so we slept in the bushes in the middle of nowhere while I had to keep an eye out for people trying to make a sneak attack. When I was about to wake everyone up I heard a crackle behind me and suddenly I felt uneasy thinking of what's happening, so I looked back behind me. But I found absolutely nothing, so I walked over to Joe to wake him up. I didn't feel right and I felt like I had to search for my team's safety. I had the feeling that there was someone watching me.

I turned cautiously around and looked everywhere and all over the area when suddenly, I saw dozens and dozens of soldiers piled on the bloody floor, lifeless. I darted back as fast as my little legs could ever go, when I saw a branch cut off by something sharp. It was on the floor right ahead of me but I leaped with all my power. I did it I flew right beyond it. A sigh of relief came out of my mouth as I spotted my crew once again sleeping on the floor not knowing what I just witnessed. I woke them up in a hurry and we headed back on our trip to campus.

When we got back to campus, we made sure to check around the area, just in case, because anything could be around waiting for the perfect moment to strike in war. After we checked we had realized that we needed more supplies so we just got our boxes full of supplies from the very back of our base. We also had to go back to the battlefield, right after I had my breakfast, since it was begging to be eaten by me. When we went to the battlefield we got something that we were not expecting.

We got surprise attacked by our next opponents but the worst thing is that we are already on the lower hand because we were not even ready and because we were low on soldiers from yesterday and half of our soldiers are in the hospital on campus. “What are we gonna do, commander?” asked a soldier on the floor. “Fight!” Screamed Joe.

I listen and peak around a corner and then I shoot...

“Wait what, where am I?” “Hello,” I walk around not knowing where I am or what to do. I felt very uneasy as I walked onto a random road in a random place seeing a couple of houses and a flower shop. I kept walking until I saw something very strange. “Why is my family here, in this random place?” I ask myself. I sprint towards them tearing up after not seeing them for a while, until I realize where I am.

The Avenue Of Honour. “Why are they all crying,” I say to myself. Before I could get to them I was awake in the battle field again, and a medic was beside me, when she screamed, “He’s awake.”

I sat up confused thinking of what just happened. “What happened,” I say, hoping for an answer. I have a glance at Joe while he is shooting his gun nonstop at our opponents. The medic told me to close my eyes and rest. "But I don't want to!" I scream. I sat up again looking around the field. "Why is everyone looking at me?" I ask.

Nobody says a peep. I looked down seeing blood dripping down from my rib. Before I knew it I was out cold again "No!" "How am I back here?" I yelp. I see my family again, and walk up slowly and discreetly towards them and the tree seems to be calling my name, but my family doesn't acknowledge that I'm even here.

"Why are they looking at a tree?" "Nobodys died, at least that I know of since I've been out at war, so why are they all looking at that tree?" I go blue and feel uneasy and sick as I see flowers around a tree but not only that. My name is on that tree. I started sprinting away, not accepting what I just saw and I wanted to go back to the way it used to be.

"No! No! N-" Poof! Before I knew it, everything went black and I could not feel a single thing, and now all I can think of is... was it all real or just a hallucination...